Program reviews

The School of Law and Economy of China is a fantastic opportunity to become familiarized with a broad array of topics relating to China. Ranging from domestic governance to business etiquette, to security, energy, the legal systems, and trade, the program offers comprehensive insight into China as a country and its place on the world stage. A complete picture of China is offered. The lecturers give interesting perspectives on all these different fields based on their own experiences (...). For myself, the inspiration gained regarding future employment possibilities was one of the most valuable aspects to the program - I did not know about a lot of jobs and sectors that some of the lectures came from, and it was incredibly interesting to ask them about how they ended up there and what they actually do in practice. Ultimately, I would highly recommend this program for anyone interested in getting to know more about the bigger picture of China!

- Niels (Netherlands)

The one-year course at the School of Law and Economy of China allowed me to develop my knowledge of contemporary China on many levels. Diverse lectures devoted to politics, economics, various areas of law and practical knowledge about running a business in China were a real repository of knowledge which I will be able to use in my future career. An excellent level of classes conducted by well-known experts from the best universities in the world exceeded my wildest expectations. Contact with the employees of the School and the organization of the course were at the highest level. Before the classes, the students were always provided with additional texts, thanks to which they could explore the topic even better and prepare for the lectures. I wholeheartedly recommend the School of Law and Economy of China to anyone who is interested in modern China and wants to deepen their knowledge on this subject. I am confident that the various topics of the lectures will interest everyone, regardless of their field of studies.

- Emilia (Poland)

The virtual time I spent in the zoom class was really great. The professors help me to develop critical thinking about China-related issues. The topics discussed covered several fields of study and they were very challenging (...) and really interesting. The course contributed to my personal growth and greatly enriched my knowledge. I also really enjoyed speaking and interacting with international students, hearing different points of views. So, all of the students keen on China should take this opportunity.
